I participated in the review of development plans by NBCUniversal. If traffic impacts had been assessed by your new guidelines, I would now be a prisoner in my home as they were planning 2900 condos on their back lot (now dropped). Universal is up against the Hollywood hills. There is no public transportation in the hills. You can't expect adults - especially seniors- to bicycle up and down the hills to the subway station. You can't get people to ride public transportation that doesn't exist. Why should the developers be allowed to imprison us so that they can make money?
