Subject: 'Wildlife Retreat' Amendment for the CEQA Guidelines

Dear Sir,

I would like to submit a 'Wildlife Retreat' amendment for the CEQA Guidelines. The State and local agencies need to address their effects and environmental impacts of their actions. For example, in Southern California too many coyotes, bobcats, and mountain lions do not have a reliable water source and are roaming neighborhoods for survival. Not only is this dangerous situation for homeowners and domestic animals; it is a dangerous situation for local wildlife itself. This situation can be rectified by a waterhole designated for wildlife only. The waterhole can have a cement bottom so it does not become a wetland. The waterhole would create its own survivable balance of life so that wild animals would have no need to come into developed neighborhoods. Another benefit of a waterhole would be a reliable water source to help fight CA fires that have become numerous and a threat to communities. I am not in the industry, so I'm hoping this amendment will be submitted. Thank you for your time.
